

This is a map of the old Prussian city of Königsberg (present day Kaliningrad). According to folklore, the following question arose, which was asked to the great mathematician Leonhard Euler in 1736:

Could a person take a walk through this city so that each bridge would be crossed exactly once?

Answer NO

Euler's idea exact sizes/distances don't matter, only overall positions

Simplified

